The entire gameplay is played in a sandbox environment: there is no defined storyline, and the game progresses naturally according to the choices you make. The most important aspect of the game is the customization and the personalization of your restaurant. Each time you start the game, you are given a random set of ingredients and a random set of appliances in a random set of furniture, and you can customize it however you like by choosing a number of recipes, growing plants, and placing advertisements on the menus that tell the story of the restaurant. After you have successfully created and managed to operate your restaurant, you will face real players, and only the most awesome choices will be posted to the leaderboards.

What's new:

Chapter Four What the f*ck is going on around here? I had been wondering this a lot the last two nights.

Normally I slept like a baby and woke up without any bothersome dreams. Time just speeded up that day, and I could not help but wonder if the bubbling sensation in my head was dying down, for it didn't present me with any major problems since my fight with Dean. I got to thinking about the entire IAP13 fiasco with that ass, Titus, and the possibility of Corey putting me back together. I needed a way to make sure that didn't happen, so my mind went into overdrive searching for what that might be. It was decision time, and it took me a little while to realize it. I got out of bed and went to make some coffee. I wanted to keep with my usual morning routine, for it helped keep my mind open and focus on my goals. I wanted my thoughts, and decisions, free from the burden of the past few days. I made myself some very good coffee and grabbed my phone, I opened it and put in my caller ID, and that inky black phone rang. I was expecting it, as I had left the house at fourish yesterday in a friendly mood, it was sure to call this early in the morning. I picked it up. "Hello?" "Hey there genius!" Corey said in his slow talking voice. This had been a time of day he often called me, when life was not enough and left his mind with little else to do. "What's good, Corey?" I replied as I took a large sip of the coffee I had just made. "Well from where I'm sitting in Tulsa can't say nothing wrong." He chuckled. "What about?" I knew he had something up his sleeve and he was probably about to give it to me. He did that a lot. "Well it's this new f*ck named Titus Smart. I call him Tweak." "How the f*ck is a f*ck named Tweak smart?" I replied, still picking at my teeth. "You know I had to tell Louis that it's bad to move my grandmother around and keep her out in the cold. That
