There are a few differences that people usually hear in the story of the Eldar and the Nazgul, the two most prominent races of the High Elves, being in the shape of Rings and the fact that the Nazgul themselves are actually a branch of the Eldar. The difference between the Eldar Rings is that they are worn by the Eldar and it's also that the Nazgul does have a separate origin in the Horsemen of the Mist. The Rings themselves are very similar to ancient Celtic amulets or Egyptian scarabs or the Hebrew high priest's medallion, forming a protective circle that will come in handy later on in the game when dealing with spirits or demons. The main difference between the rings is that unlike a typical Celtic amulet or a high priest's symbol, the rings are worn by the characters and not just the owners. The Nazgul even went as far as calling the rings the skin of their Eldar characters and that they are the symbiotic companions, much like the Nazgul themselves are to their human characters. The rings are made of stone with a physical off-screen trigger that opens the first part of the ring, revealing the stone's soul. You'll notice that the stones don't seem like a typical stone. It has the outline of a horse running with a fiery body, and the main difference between the normal stone and these magical stones are that these stones glow with the glow of a mage's dark magic, making them very special stones and exceptionally strong. You'll find that these stones don't come very often in the game so it's recommended that you collect them as fast as you can in order to make them less of a hassle. Crafting Once you've found your Stones of Power, the next step would be to craft your first Staff. You'll have to gather a special

The Great Red Dragon dispatched a group of orcs to the Isle of Ahn, but the vilified orcs were blocked away by the forces of light led by a hero named Po. The two forces battled and the Great Red Dragon obtained a magic fragment, which awakened its innate rage. The Great Red Dragon is a being of unequaled power. Although the fragment only heals the body, it also awakens the soul. Thus, a vicious cycle is created where a person is driven to wage war because of their damaged soul and pride.
