CNET has great deals all the time. Plus, our new DeskTime feature keeps you on top of your productivity. Editors' note: This guide was originally published in May 2013. It has been updated to include information from Windows 8.1 and Windows Phone 8.1, which share the same UI and user-experience on the PC. Windows 8.1 brings a new Start screen, desktop, snap windows, the Metro UI design language, and Windows Store apps. But before we can get going with these exciting new features, we need a way to make our desktop apps touch friendly. As we all know, Windows Phone 8 is a Windows 8.1 feature, so the user interface and experience for both platforms is all the same. Apps are a similar experience for Windows 8 and Windows 8.1 phones and tablets. Everything we can do in Windows Phone 8 we can do in Windows 8.1. So with that in mind, this tutorial explains how to convert a Windows Phone 8 app into a touch-friendly Windows 8.1 app. Before you start, make sure you have the development environment installed on your Windows

8.1 PC. This tutorial assumes that you have Visual Studio 2013 installed on your Windows 8.1 machine and have your app project selected in the Visual Studio window. Creating a Mobile App for Windows 8.1 The first thing you'll need to do is open up Visual Studio and create a new Windows 8.1 project. Since this tutorial is about a Windows 8.1 app, we'll use a blank Windows 8.1 project template for our conversion. This will provide us with the project structure and a pre-created project file that we can use as a template. Create a new Windows 8.1 project If you are creating a new Windows 8.1 project for a third party app you already have, you can skip to the next section. If you are creating
