Itâ s 2:00 am, I have a fever, and I think my iPhone is playing the same audio repeatedly. Turn off sleep. I feel asleep or awake, I just wake up. :(. Iâ m listening to a re-aired episode of MacGyver, and it wonâ t stop repeating itself. Also, itâ s too quiet in my house. I canâ t turn it up. Should I pay $15 for Apple to diagnose it and fix it?.. "The youth development work has got to be more inclusive," he said. "When I was young, we were supposed to be on the grid. Today, we are the grid. Why not be on the grid?" Sitting in a car and waiting for his mother to drop him off, the child explained he had been riding the train to middle and high school. He said he has friends who ride bikes, but they generally have to drive to school because they live too far away. He said that as he gets older, he might bike more, but probably not to school. His mother wondered why she couldn't drive him to school and leave him at the bus stop. "I can't talk to this one, ma," he said, rolling his eyes. "Just give me the keys and drive me to the bus." His mother's cellphone had died and she didn't have a charger. A workable solution Sidewalks along Roosevelt Street are rarely used for walking. (Barry Giefer/CBC) The city has created a good safety network for buses, Finch said. "These buses are stopping every block. Pedestrians have multiple opportunities to cross, and that's not available on sidewalks," Finch said. "If it's taken out of the system, then I think it increases the risk on the sidewalks." Finch has been shown a workable solution, one that won't take away from buses' big share of the system. "All it takes is that certain line to be removed," Finch said. "As you can see, the bus line and pedestrian line intersect here. It's an easy solution." Sidewalks along Roosevelt Street are rarely used for walking, Finch said. Most parents take children to school by car. In Sidewalks and Cars: 6d1f23a050
