I googled the problem and posted. Funny, the forum members give it a thumbs down, but then after a couple days they were still away as if a hit and run were occurring. Yeah, I won't let anyone on here tell me what to do. I am used to this forum, and I know how you guys operate. I have said what I'm going to do, and I have left the forum and not opened it since. I have done it to protect my identity, and to protect you guys, as well. Yeah, but I am not gonna be forced to eat your dog food. A beta tester for Madden 06 does no good for me. In fact, a beta tester for Madden 06 does way more harm for me than good. And I have said what I am going to do. RENO, Nev. (AP) — A man is facing charges for trespassing after he was caught on video entering a southern Nevada national wildlife refuge, saying he was hiking and is not a terrorist. Brian Vick, 35, was arrested on March 24 as he parked his vehicle, got out and entered the northern perimeter of the Gold Butte National Conservation Area in southern Nevada. A female officer questioned Vick and learned he has previous felony convictions, which in itself was a reason to deny him entry to the national park, the Lincoln County Sheriff's Office said. "I was just going hiking and I guess they thought I was more of a terrorist than a hiker," Vick told KRNV-TV. Vick faces a charge of second-degree trespassing for entering Gold Butte. Allogeneic hematopoietic cell transplantation (allo-HCT) is a potentially curative therapy for some patients with acute myeloid leukemia (AML), although it is associated with significant morbidity and mortality. This grant application will focus on a new treatment for AML which, unlike allo-HCT, is done as a primary therapy and may overcome some of the significant problems associated with allo-HCT. Our approach to AML is based on several concepts and findings from the literature that suggest that an important early step in the AML disease process is the accumulation of genetic abnormalities in hematopoietic stem cells, that occur prior to the outgrowth of leukemia. These concepts and findings are consistent with the pathogenesis of AML suggested by our observation that normal mice can be leukemized by transplanting unfractionated bone marrow cells from AML patients. These observations suggest that the majority of leukemic stem cells are present in the bone marrow of patients with AML, and that these cells represent the clonal origin of AML in each patient. We hypothesize that chemotherapy and/or radiotherapy will selectively kill normal hematopoietic stem cells, perhaps even selectively killing AML stem cells, but will not affect leukemic stem cells. Consequently, we propose that the stem cell compartment of AML patients will be largely intact and unaffected by therapy, allowing patients to be successfully treated with a remission-induction therapy without prior myeloablative therapy. We also hypothesize that the disease-free interval after such therapy will be long because of the essentially non-leukemic nature of the stem cell compartment that has been left intact. To test these hypotheses we have designed a pilot study that will examine the ability of a novel regimen of immunosuppressive therapy with sub-therapeutic doses of the antileukemic agent cytarabine to selectively ablate normal hematopoietic stem cells. If successful, this study will provide a proof of principle for a phase II trial of this approach as a post-remission therapy 6d1f23a050
