the italian association of music schools is endeavoring to demonstrate the availability of a modernized edition of ancient notation in a style and format that makes it most readily accessible to musicians and musicologists. a new edition of some texts, currently in preparation, is expected to begin appearing in volume soon. the digitization of several important manuscripts is underway. domenico scarlatti's catalogue of keyboard sonatas is also available online. the french-based international institute for musicology (inrim) is conducting a project to make the index to the biblioteca de manuscrito musical latino contemporaneo available on the website of the library of the ministero per i beni e le attività culturali. although it is primarily directed towards the study of modern musical cultures, it is of interest to musicologists. in particular, by bringing together digital images of manuscripts and their related library collections, it adds to our understanding of music at the intersections of academic disciplines. there are only a few known biblioteca nazionale marciana collections currently accessible through the collection management system ebiblioteca nazionale marciana of the biblioteca nazionale di palazzo ducale in venice. among the desirable items described by the collection manager, ovidio alberto tiberi, are pieces of decoration by the well-known venetian painter agostino masucci. the remainder are mainly italian songs. only scans of the binding of the main collection (folios.a - isp.) are currently available. the convocation of church musicians (cnm) publishes a journal; it used to print an annual directory of "the church musicians of britain and ireland" but now it's in digital form and updated quarterly. the directory is split into several sections including: - the singers in the choirs of cathedrals - the singers in the main cathedrals of england and wales - the organists in cathedrals - the choirmasters (soloists and instrumentalists) in cathedrals - the church bandleaders in cathedrals - the church band and wind band leaders in the church of england - church organists - church organists with a separate listing for the church of england - church organists with a separate listing for the church of ireland - church organists with a separate listing for the church of scotland - church band and wind band leaders in england and wales - church band and wind band leaders in scotland - wind band leaders in the church of england - wind band leaders in the church of scotland.

international music score library project (imslp) is a joint project of music librarians and publishers, international and national, to create a freely available searchable public domain international database of music scores. its goals are to make all manuscripts of music parts held in libraries and repositories in the world freely available to musicians, teachers and students worldwide, and to provide a better access to music scores in the library. the project is advancing by working with more and more participating institutions, by expanding into new media for music scores, and by promoting long term preservation of digital resources. the international music score library project (imslp) is a joint project of music librarians and publishers, international and national, to create a freely available searchable public domain international database of music scores. the rlm seicir's latin praxis is a collection of medieval and renaissance latin texts about music that are organized by the four modes: the locrian, oboe-like lusk, the chain-like spira, and the high-pitched, quaver-like recitativo. several texts exist that provide a description of all the modes together. the database contains 21 texts and covers a variety of topics, for example, the ad effusionem (how to tune a stringed instrument to a specific pitch). this is a particularly valuable resource for musicologists, even though little music notation exists. the slavery abolition collection is a group of more than 70,000 papers, including letters and personal documents, documenting the history of slavery and its abolition in the united states. the collection contains documents, obituaries, accounts of slaves, and legal and medical records relating to slaves. it chronicles not only the freeing of slaves but also their reintegration into american society. this information is valuable not only for the study of american history but also, for example, for the history of the blues. one segment of the database contains approximately 2,000 songs about slavery, mostly collected during the 1970s to 1980s. they include african american spirituals, work songs, and gospel songs. the database can be
